VOL. XXI. CLOVERPORT, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1896. NO 2.

WHY WE FAVOR IT.

Out of the Wisdom of Man Came the Use of Two Metals for Us as Money, To be Coined at a Ratio of 16 to 1.

At This Ratio the Amount of Gold and Silver in the World Is Exactly Equal and Has Always Been That Way.

IT IS MINED OUT OF THE EARTH AT THAT RATIO.

Dealers in Money Have Caused One-half of the Money of the World to be Destroyed that They Might the Easier Corner the Balance.

By Making Money Scarce They Make It More Valuable and They Are Thus Enabled to Reduce the Price of Labor and Products.

WE WANT FREE COINAGE of BOTH METALS.

You have asked me why I favor the free coinage of silver. My reply is as follows:

Bimetallism—the right to use either of two metals for money—is a financial system born out of the ineetlish wisdom of mankind. There are scientific truths to support it.

Money is a necessity to civilization. When a thing becomes a necessity there should be a normal quantity of it There is a necessity for so much breadstuff, and we meet a demand for it by creating a normal supply. Money is made by law. There is no such thing as money without the law designating something as such. To create a normal supply of money, the laws must designate a substance of sufficient quantity from which money may be coined.

If a normal supply cannot be obtained from the substance selected by law from which primary money is to be coined, there will be a scarcity of that necessity to civilization, the greatest of all necessities—money. In selecting precious metals, by law, from which money is to be make, the selection is made from a limited product To give you an idea how limited it is I will say statistical reports show that there is about $4,000,000,000 of gold in the world available for use as money, and $4,000,000,000 of silver in the world available for use as money. That is after ages of delving in the earth for these precious metals, this is the quantity now of each in existance available for use as money. The quantity of gold above named—all there is in the world available for use as money—will go in the space of twenty-two feet each way. All of the silver in the world available for use as money will go in the space of sixty-six feet each way. Politicians may roll figures off their tongues as liberally as they wish, but after all is said this is the result. A cube of sixty-six feet in silver is in the world available for use as money.

If we select gold alone as money, the next thing to consider is the demand for money. We have seen what the supply is, and the next question is the demand. The notes, bonds and mortgages payable in gold, issued by the city of Chicago, its inhabitants, corporations, including railways terminating there, in the aggregate amount to as much as all the gold in the world available for use as money.

The railway bonds, payable in gold, of the United States amount to 5,000,000,000. This is $1,000,000,000 more than all the gold in the world available for use as money, and the railway indebtness is but a drop in the bucket of the gold indebtedness of the world. A healthy reserve maintained by all of the gold governments of the world to float their representative money will require more gold than there is in the world; and to the extent that they are unable to maintain such a reserve they must curtail their quantity of representative money and hold the total volume of money below the normal quantity necessary for civilization. All banking systems in the world floating representative money must likewise maintain a gold reserve to float their outstanding paper and token money. This only contemplates money reserves, and we see that it leaves none for circulation among the people. No substance should be selected as the sole material of our primary money that does not contemplate its being in the possession of the people and circulating among them.

No material should be selected as the primary money of the people that is so limited in quantity as to be capable of being cornered by those who make it a business of selecting money as the property in which they deal. To do so places civilization at the mercy of the money dealers. In the discussion of the money question you should never lose sight of the fact that money is a necessity to civilization.

Out of the wisdom of man came the use of two metals for us as money, these metals to be coined into money at a ratio in weight of 16 to 1, or in the ratio provided from time to time. The option was given by law for the people to use money made from either metal, neither redeemable in the other, but each of itself money. The option was with the debtor, the persons setting the money in motion. The debtor used the one most accessible, so if silver became the cheaper the demand was shifted to it, and this brought it back to a parity with gold, or vice versa.

The two metals together, both limited in quantity, furnish a larger volume of money and a more stable supply than either alone can. As the demand draws first on one and then on the other, there is an elasticity and a dual strength to the financial system thus arranged. With gold and silver both as money, one relieves the strain upon the other. One is in competition with the other to supply the demand when the law is adjusted to bimetallism.

For all useful purposes that cater to the desire of man in the arts and sciences, sixteen parts of silver are as valuable as one part of gold. If neither were used as money, it is reasonable to suppose that sixteen parts of silver would be worth more than one part of gold. Silver possesses substantially all of the qualities of gold. The two metals are similar in nearly all respects. They are both durable; neither will stain, corrode or rust.

The statement so frequently heard that the stamp of the Government on a metal does not add to its value is a common error into which many people fall. Under bimetallism the mints are open to the free coinage of all that comes—of both gold and silver—and the people have the right to use either as money in the payment of taxes, purchases and in all the transactions of life where money is required. The stamp of the Government. It is true, is not what gives value to the metal, but it is the demand for the metal for use as money, as the law was provided, that gives to such metal its value. The law, by making it money, has made the demand, and it is the demand that adds to its value

Under the present law gold has the unlimited right of way as money, and all the demand is on gold, and the bimetallic option has been taken away from silver. The mints are open to the coinage of all the gold that will come, and the debtor has no option by which he can use gold or silver at his pleasure; he is confined to gold alone. This is monometallism' It cuts all the demand on gold and takes the demand from silver. It bulls the price of gold and bears the price of silver. Under bimetallism the demand shifts at the will of the debtor. Under this shifting demand the two metals for the three hundred years that we have for statistical history of, prior to 1873, did not vary in commercial parity more than 3 per cent. And during that time there were periods when the world's production of silver was $2 to 1 of gold, and at other periods $1 of gold to 1 of silver. The supply of each, however, being limited, the demand maintained the commercial parity. Since 1873 and for the twenty two years that have elapsed the world's production of the two metals has been about dollar for dollar, and yet, the demand having been taken from silver by all the leading governments of the world, the commercial parity between gold and silver has been broken 50 per cent.

It is a common statement that silver is now legal tender to any amount. This is not true. The Bland-Allison act of 1878, that restored to silver its legal tender quality, had a proviso: "Except where otherwise provided in the contract." This gave the creditor the option as to which money he would receive when he could dictate the terms in which a note or bond is payable, in gold. The act of 1873 demonetized silver for us, and the act of 1878 drove a knife through the corpse of bimetallism. It authorized contracts that destroyed the vital principle in bimetallism.

It is a common statement that free coinage of silver will run gold out of circulation, Bimetallism contemplates that from time to time one or the other of the metals will be hard to get and will go out of circulation. It is the right to use either metal and the fact that the other metal is accessible and may be used that constitutes the principal merit of bimetallism. There is a calamity when one metal goes out of circulation, if it is the only metal the law has provided for use as primary money. But there is safety in one of the metals going out of circulation if the other metal is accessible, the mints open to its free coinage, and the people have the option to use it.

Gold is now out of circulation. There is no gold among the people. It is cornered in the bank vaults. It is leaving us to go to Europe to pay $250,000,000 annually as interest on our gold debts, authorized by the act of 1878. Under the gold standard it is only a question of time when all our gold will leave us. We produce about $40,000,000 a year of gold and are sending $250,000 000 a year to Europe as interest on debts of ours held by foreigners. Every dollar shipped back to us in borrowed gold that is increasing our gold debt to Europe and intensifying the situtlon. It means that in the future more gold must be annually shipped to Europe to pay our increasing gold interest. It means that we have committed ourselves to an erroneous financial system and that the longer it lasts the greater our suffering must be in the end

The gist of the financial question is in this: The men who deal in money are interested in making the property they deal in more and more valuable. This is a natural instinct in the dealers of any property. A cattleman of Kansas who owns 10,000 head of cattle knows that he could make his 10,000 head of cattle worth considerably more to him if he could cause the sudden death of half of the other cattle in the world. The money dealer understands this principle, and knowing that money is made by law, he has gone where the law is made and caused the destruction of one-half of the money of the world. He is a dealer in money—it is the property he studies. When he makes his money so valuable that it will buy more and more of your property and mine he is the gainer. When the farmer's wheat exchanges for less and less money the farmer grows relatively poorer than the man who owns the money The unfortunate circumstances that adds additional gravity to the situation is that the money dealer deals in a property upon which all civilization is depending. It is the blood of civilization in which he deals, and when he absorbs it he strangles civilization. When he depletes the arteries of commerce by hoarding about him this blood of civilization society, arts, commerce, civilization itself, is affected.

Free coinage of silver will relieve the strain on gold and break the grip of the money lender, whose fingers are now mercilessly tightening around the throat of this government. All is at stake in the struggle—our families, society and Republic itself.—W. H Harvey in N Y. Journal.

Nervous

People find just the help they so much need, in Hood's Sarsaparilla. It furnishes the desired strength by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and thus builds up the nerves, tones the stomach and regulates the whole system. Read this:

"I want to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla. My health run down, and I had the grip. After that, my heart and nervous system were badly affected, so that I could not do my own work. Our physician gave me some help, but did not cure. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Soon I could do all my own housework. I have taken

Cured

Hood's Pills with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and they have done me much good. I will not be without them. I have taken 12 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and through the blessing of God, it has cured me. I worked as hard as ever the past summer, and I am thankful to say I am well. Hood's Pills when taken with Hood's Sarsaparilla help very much." Mrs. M. M. Messenger, Freehold, Penn.

Henry Watterson's Predictions.
(Atlanta Constitution)

Colonel Watterson's political predictions are just as lurid this year as ever, and just about as likely to come true.

Won't They?

Come On With Your Panic,
(Atlanta Constitution.)

We cordially invite the money power to start its threatened panic This would absolutely settle the hash of the McKinley-Hanna trust. It is pretty well settled now, but a panic would prove to be the finishing stroke.

Murray Is the Man.
(Meade County Messenger.)

The Hon David R. Murray made a stirring speech at Ekron last Saturday. His views were enthusiastically received and it was the comment all through the crowd "Mr. Murray is the man to represent us in the next Congress"

Chickens Come Home To Roost.
(Raleigh News and Observer.)

'Chickens come home to roost." The gold papers call all free silver advocates "anarchists." Since Herr Most, the biggest anarchist of the crowd, has declared for gold, these journals are suggesting that argument is better than abuse.

How Is The Fisherman?
(Arkansas Gazette.)

Mr. Herbert, the secretary of the navy, is the first member of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet to announce that he will not support Mr Bryan. While it makes little difference what he does, the people would like to hear from Mr. Herbert's chief, the fisherman of Buzzard's Bay.

A Harmless Bugaboo.
(Buffalo, N. Y., Evening Times)

The cry of national distress if the Democratic ticket is elected is a harmless bugaboo. But the laborer, the mechanic, the artisan, the professional man they have not plenty of money. They have difficulty in securing money. They are the ones who are dissatisfied with existing conditions. And are they not the ones who make up the great majority of the American people?

A Depressing Fact.
[New York World.]

During the fiscal year closing with June 30 exports exceeded imports of merchandise by $102,000,000. This is gratifying to all who are interested in the welfare of the country, but it must be very depressing to orators who have been preparing to mourn over the calamity of "an adverse trade balance."

No Dealer In Platitudes.
(Los Angeles Herald.)

Bryan is fertile in reason and frankness, not evasion and ambiguity. He is no dealer in platitudes, ancient and meaningless; what he says he means and what he means can be understood by all No boss-ridden convention thrust him on an unwilling party, but without intrigue, chicanery, premeditation or one dollar of corruption he was made the nominee of the greatest and grandest party the country has ever known. He is the unpledged candidate of an untrammeled convention.

Little Desire For a Third Ticket.
(New York World.)

The World prints to-day highly interesting dispatches from the Chairman of the Democratic County Committees in this State on the political situation and the feelings of Democratic voters in regard to the Chicago platform and ticket. Their report is quite general that the knife of clevage cuts both ways on the silver question. There is apparently very little desire for a third ticket.

His Course a Living Lie.
[New Orleans States.]

All the world loves and admires an honest and courageous man. All the world despises a hypocrite and a coward. Judged by this canon, what must all the men who knew the record of Wm. McKinley, the Republican nomul money candidate for the presidency, think o him? His whole political course has been a living lie. He has been true to nothing because he has never had an honest manly conviction on eny great question. He is the highest type of the Arkansas statesman and candidate, who, having addressed his fellow citizens and receiving no applause, added: Fellow citizens, them's my views; but if they don't suit they kin be changed."

All Are Business Men
[Bryan's Speech]

We say to you that you have made too limited in its application the definition of business man. The man who is employed for wages is as much a business man as his employer. (Continued cheering.) The attorney in a country town is as much a business man as the corporation counsel in a great metropolis. The merchant at a cross-roads store is as much a business man as the merchant of New York. The Farmer who goes forth in the morning and toils all day, begins in the spring and toils all summer, and by the application of brain and muscle to the natural resources of this country creates wealth, is a business man. The man who goes upon the board of trade and bets upon the price of grain.

"The miners who go a thousand feet into the earth or climb 2,000 feet upon the ell ff and bring forth from their hiding places the precious metals to be poured in the channels of trade are as much business men as the few financial magnates who in a back room corner the money of the world.

"We come to speak for this broader class of business men."

Rank Financial Folly.
[New York Recorder.]

Gold-standard champions of the most ultra school admit that as the country grows in population and business the volume of its currency must be increased, or there will be trouble. But within the last two years the circulation of the country has been diminished by $161,000,000. To keep pace with the country's growth the circulation should instead have been increased by $45,000,000. This means, if it is to be kept up, a yearly contraction of the money volume on which all business is done of about $100,000,000 a year That will never do for a settled policy. Cleveland thinks it is statesmanship, no doubt Every intelligent student of the science of money knows it is rank folly. It would eventually ruin all business.

Points of Recommendation.
Meade County Messenger.

The Hon David R. Murray is a candidate for Congress in the Fourth Congressional District. His card appears in this issue. He briefly defines his position to the Democratic voters. He is opposed to a fight within his own party. He places the success of his party paramount to his own. His views and conclusions have all been reached with a view to harmony and the ultimate success of his party. Mr. Murray's views on the currency question are too well known to be defined here. His opinions are in accord with the policy of the late convention. Mr. Murray has been a lifelong Democrat and has ever stood as the embodiment of its principles. He has done valiant service for the cause and has proved himself a good man in the fight, willing, ready and always trustworthy, ready to take any part and he was sure to perform that part well. In our honest opinion he's a man with great promise of usefulness and honor. He has especially for valuable service to the party and the public. Its understands how to beat present a political truth to reach the popular mind, which is a great faculty. He is a man of mind and soul, genial, earnest, persuasive, firm in declarations but without terms of denunciation to those who honestly differ with him. His advocates according in his judgment, but wants it to be a fight for principle and not for men. A contest, a struggle for principle is to be commended, but not a warfare between contending persons. Mr. Murray aspects support, but only as deemed to the good of the party.

Reaping Results of the Gold Policy
[The New York Financial News.]

Wall street is getting down to business and beginning to feel the result of the stagnation throughout the country which has been the inevitable outcome of twenty-three years of the gold policy—a policy not of laws but of men, a policy of administration not made by the laws but by dictation of great interests. A policy which has sacrificed the productive interests of the county to those engaged in promoting the floating of great debts. People talk about the "silver craze," the "greenback craze" and all sorts of crazes. The country is suffering the natural results of the bond craze, which has run up to $20,000,000,000, under a financial policy which has cut down the earning power of the people, restricted their exchanges and reduced to zero the net earnings of producers. It is out of these net earnings alone that good business can be made for our vast railway system—half that of the world—and at the bottom every dollar of debt created on railways and on every other interest in the country, must be paid out of net earnings of producers. No net earnings means no pay. The quicker the country drops the business of edncation itself on a theory that a continuation of the policy of further piling up interest-bearing debt on terms which restrict our power to earn money to meet interest and principal, or that fastening upon ourselves a policy that cripples our powers of production and exchange is a good thing for existing securities, the quicker we will get on the road to better times' to conditions which improve the incomes of 75,000,000 of people, and then we can improve the incomes of all their institutions.

They Are Solters
[Bowling Green Times.]

I, t no man, who makes up his mind to follow in the wake of the Courier-Journal, be deceived into believing that he is not a bolter. All over the country the Democratic masses met in conventions in which both gold and silver men participated. When the verdict was rendered and the result cast up it was found that the great majority of the Democratic party favored the free and unlimited coinage of silver and their representatives were so instructed.

It is too late, after the gold men have done all in their power to change that verdict, for them to say that they took no part in the nomination of a candidate at Chicago. Up to the time of the balloting the Eastern delegates were eager to vote on every proposition and took part in every step of the convention. Finding that they were unable to reverse the will of the people as expressed in their tents and refused to participate in a nomination. By every rule of party discipline every Democrat is bound to support the ticket and every man who severs his connection with his party now can no longer claim to be a Democrat The Chicago Convention has written the party law and those who repudiate it are bolters and can no longer claim to be Democrats.

Among His Friends.
(Atlanta Constitution.)

Herr Most, the apostle of anarchy in this country, has taken his stand with the gold party.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have berries, grapes and peaches, a year old, fresh as when picked, I use the California Cold process, do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold, keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last week I sold directions to over 120 families; anyone will pay a dollar for directions, when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident any one can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail sample of fruit and complete directions, to any of your readers, for eighteen two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc, to me.

FRANCIS CASEY, St. Louis, Mo.

As She Figured It.

"Orlando," she said, "I am afraid you are getting tired of having me ask you for money."

"Well, you see" he answered, "I have a good deal of expense to meet just at this time of year and it does seem once in awhile that women don't make enough allowances for that sort of thing."

"Well," she answered, "I've thought of a way that will do it all very nicely."

"What is it?"

"When ever you go to the barber shop and the boy brushes you off, you give him a dime, don't you?"

"Yes,

"And when you are away from home at a hotel and a boy brings you ice water you give him a dime."

"yes."

"Of course."

"Well, you've often said that women have no head for arithmetic, but I am going to convince you to the contrary. I am going to turn to make your favorite mixed drinks That'll be 15 cents day. Then I'll bring you ice water in the morning. That'll be 10 cents. And then I'll brush your clothes off with a whisk broom, and that'll be 10 cents more. There's 35 cents a day. I've figured it all out on this little piece of paper. Three hundred and sixty five days in a year, that's 365 times 35, which makes $127 75. If you will give me that without my asking for it, just as you do the bell boys and the bartender, I can put it with my regular housekeeping allowance and manage to get along much better."—Detroit Free Press.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the blood of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal illness fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at Short & Haynes' drug store.

WE are sorry the Hon. David B. Hill is no longer a Democrat.

BIMETALLISM has been a principle of Democracy for more than a hundred years.

IT is so hot up in Meade county that they are boiling eggs in the ponds to save stove wood.

THERE are four or five good Democrats in Stephensport that we are awful sorry to see standing off.

THE idea of Ludwell Alexander Foote, a lifelong Democrat, voting for McKinley. It is too bad.

IF the silver agitation has done nothing more it has prevented a bond issue, at least, until after the November election.

SEVERAL sound money Democrats in this county have already expressed their intention of supporting the Chicago ticket.

MR. A. Heron, Sup't. of the Breckenridge Company, has the thanks of many Cloverporters for courtesies extended on his rond.

THERE is no man in this town who has more friends than Grant Gregory, and they are all in sympathy with him in his great affliction.

BERT Cunningham says he is a full-fledged candidate for jailer of this county. And Scott Cart says he is right after him with whip and spur

SMITH Waggoner the Populist Evangelist is strong for Bryan. We knew Smith would get into the Democratic fold. All he wanted was a little time.

THE report comes from Frankfort that Governor Bradley thinks he will call an extra session of the Legislature, and take steps to abolish the Eddyville penitentiary.

A THIRD ticket in the field, calling itself Democratic, would meet with insult from the best element in the Democratic party to-day, and would not be countenanced from any quarter.

YOU needn't mention it, but the Republicans are the worst scared set of fellows you ever saw. They are trying to keep a stiff upper lip but its quiver gives them away.

THE way to keep cool this weather is to quit drinking whisky, looking at the thermometer and running after the ice wagon, especially when the latter has a runaway mule hitched to it.

THE Populists at St. Louis last week nominated W. J. Bryan for President and Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, for Vice President. The National Silver Party nominated Bryan and Sewall.

WE are satisfied that if this sweltering weather continues there won't be a goldbug left to tell the story by November. The way they are flopping their wings and crying for Bryan and the shade is amusing.

COLONEL Sam Sulzer is one of the most hopeful Republicans we have met since the Chicago Convention. He says Indiana will give McKinley 50,000 majority. We don't believe one word of it, Colonel.

THE Hon. Vicifimus Basterfield Burton and Judge Virgil Gilbert Babbage opened up the campaign in a joint debate out at West View last Saturday. They do say that the Katie Dids have ceased to sing in that neighborhood since.

SOME people are censuring Dave Murray because he don't get out and make a scramble for the nomination. We think he is showing his good sense by staying at home. Who can blame a man for not running after an office in this kind of weather?

THE steamer, H. F. Frisbie is coming up the river with a Cuban flag floating from her flagstaff. It is the first ever seen on the Ohio, and is attracting much attention, and being received enthusiastically by the people on both sides of the river. Capt. Frank Farnsly's motto is "Liberty First, Last and all the time."

THERE are a number of Republicans who will swear that the News didn't make a fair count of the poll given at the Stephensport picnic. But it is a true count all the same and we'll swear that we wasn't looking for it. The number of Republicans who express themselves as going to support Bryan is actually surprising.

THE goldbug papers in the Democratic party to-day make up their stock in trade principally by heaping abuse upon those who differ with them on the money question. The good people in the country too, who have a right to do their own thinking on the question, are letting such papers drop, as their subscriptions expire.

THE Democratic bolters at Chicago have decided to call another convention in the near future, they say, to put up a candidate for President. He will not be a Democrat because no one has the authority to call a convention now to nominate a candidate for President, as a Democrat, that work having already been done and accomplished at Chicago.

GROVER Cleveland went into the White House four years ago on a platform, which, on behalf of a majority of the people of this country, pledged enumerous reforms which they never got, and which were never attempted. So it is the Chicago ticket will win because it is led by a man who has fearlessly fought for the people's rights, and who has always been too brave to be led around by the money kings.

I AM an intense silver man. I believe in the principle thoroughly. I am not second to my leader in my advocacy of free silver. I have had heartfelt convictions on the subject for a long time. It is the belief that the people demand, and the Democratic party is the party to give it to them. The Democratic party is the party of the many and not of the few.—Arthur Sewall, Democratic nominee for Vice President.

TEACHER'S INSTITUTE NOTES.

Teaching penmanship, is a thing that has been too much neglected in the public schools.

The Hardinsburg Public School will be conducted this year by Prof. K. Harman, and Mr. M. E. Avitt.

Prof. J. C. Pirtle, of Buffalo, Ky., delivered an interesting address to the teachers on Wednesday night.

Miss Nellie Simons, of Cloverport, read an interesting paper on the subject of "The Importance of Attention."

Prof. Roberts, of Meade county, and Prof. Kerrick, of McLean county, have been employed to teach in the B. N. C. Hardinsburg.

Herbert Beard exhibited some valuable ideas on the importance of "The Study of Human Life" in an essay prepared by him Thursday.

Wallace Gray, Meade county, came to the front Wednesday morning with an original poem, entitled "A Pen Picture." It brought down the house.

J. R. Cuyle, Leitchfield; R. H. Spurlar, Short Creek; H. C. Trman, Fordsville; S. C. Stephens, Beaverdam, were among the visiting teachers.

Dr. Milton Board lectured to the Institute Friday on "Temperment." The subject was well handled and called forth many hearty responses.

The Compulsory Educational Law, brought forth a lively discussion on Tuesday. A majority of the teachers seemed to think that it would be enforced.

Prof Logan, of Cloverport, kept the institute well in hand the entire week, as conductor and presiding officer. He is very thorough in his work on education, and the city of Cloverport may well feel proud that they are to have his services another year in their college.

How to secure a country school, was a subject assigned to Prof Coyle. He handled it well. One thing he discountenanced above all others he said, that was underbidding for the country school. He said he hoped none of the teachers of this county would be guilty of underbidding.

There were some eight or ten Literary Journals represented at the Institute, several of which were subscribed for by the teachers. The News came in for its share. We promised to treat them right during the coming year, and publish anything that was of interest to the teachers of the county.

One of the most prominent teachers before the Institute, and one whom all the teachers seemed to admire, was Prof. Coyle, of Leitchfield. Prof. Coyle recites well, talks well, and sings well. He is a hail fellow well met. He is heartily interested in the subject of education, and is posted on any subject. His address to the Institute Wednesday night was listened to with a great deal of interest.

Superintendent Driskell has appointed the following as Vice Presidents of the Teacher's Association in the county. Cloverport district, Prof. J. H. B Logan. Association to be held on 30th of Sept., at Cloverport. Hardinsburg district, M. E. Avitt; Stephensport, district, C. F. Cashman; Webster district, S. George Hook; Custer district, No 5, J. H. Hoskinson; district No. 6 Joel H. Pile, Glendeane.

The weather is worse than torrid. Its most torridest and I'd rather any time dwell on Greenland's icy mountains than on India's coral beach for one's disposition would be forever ruined.

The Ohio is raging, quite an unusual occurrence for this season. The boating stage will be good for some time to come and that brings to mind that on last Sunday Mrs. Chas. Moremen took a small party on the Buckeye State to meet the Tarascon and return. Charlie Moremen is clerk on the Buckeye.

George Worland went to Louisville last Sunday to see the game of base-ball and reports it a fine one. The Colonels, poor fellows, were victorious which calls to my mind how they wiped up the earth with the Bostonians in the spring of '92, and on their own ground in the cultured city. The Kentucky boys will jump up yet in the list.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Brown, of Ekron, gave a very brilliant 5 o'clo tea last Friday night. A platform was erected in the yard. Bodenstadt furnished the music which goes without saying that it was entrancing. Mr. and Mrs. Brown entertain most delightfully always and this occasion was no exception. A number of our young people went out.

I note the comment from that facile pen of Preston and appreciate it from such an authoritative source. We have no superiority to the lords but I'll declare the Sun Flower State and her sister could find more lucrative employment for their women than speaking before boisterous, rampant crowds composed of all classes. I detest nanrpation while I don't want Odemonetisation"—16 to 1 is even better.

The Hon Wm. Sweeney held forth at the Conrt-house last Saturday night to a small audiance of both sexes. He is a good talker and fairly and concisely sets forth his opinions in that inevitable nutshell way. He endorses the Chicago platform, says it is purely Democratic, espouses the nominees, warmly scored the Louisville press and told the people what he wonld do for them if elected to Congress. I am for the gentleman secondly. The Hon. D. R. comes first except you know—that issue. I'm Democratic enough to abide by majority.

Our party of eight took supper with Mrs. Nancy Ashcraft last Thursday evening and from there drove out to the concert at the Sandy Hill church. Mrs. Ashcraft and her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Richardson, Jr., entertained us most agreeably and that excellent supper did much towards fitting us for the entertainment. Owen Meredith knew human nature when he wrote those lines about a good meal. The ride out was delightful and still more so returning. Luna never shed her soft beams more softly or more divinely. But the Concert! It was given by the Literary Club of Sandy Hill and was a great success in every particular.

Prof. D. S. Roberts went to Hardinsburg Monday to take charge of the school at that place, he having been employed to teach there.

BRECKENRIDGE NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1896.

THE PLEA OF SENATOR HILL.

His Speech at the Chicago Convention.

MISTAKES IN THE PLATFORM

A Question of Business, Not of Courage.

In His Denunciation of the Silver-ites He Tells Them They Plot For Defeat—A Defense Of the Administration—Plea For International Bimetallism.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:

I do not know that it is necessary that I should reply to the distinguished senator from South Carolina [Tillman]. And I trust that in any reply I may make I shall not fail to accord to him the profound respect.

I would say at the outset I am a Democrat, but I am not a revolutionist. I will say further that no matter what the question, you cannot drive me out of the Democratic party.

Without intending to specially reply to the remarks of the distinguished senator from South Carolina, I will only say that it was a waste of time upon his part to assume that we were so ignorant as not to know that it was his state that attempted to break up the Democratic party in 1860.

Democratic Party Will Live.

But the party has survived the attempts of every section of the country to divide it, to distract it. It lives today, and I hope it will long survive.

My mission here today is to unite, not to divide; to build up, not to destroy, to plan for victory, and not to plot for defeat.

I know that I speak to a convention which, as now constituted, probably does not agree with the viewsof the state that I especially represent upon this occasion. But I know that, notwithstanding the attack which has been made upon that state, you will have no fear for my cause. New York makes no apology to South Carolina for her situation. We got our Democracy from our fathers. We did not make it, we inherit it from those whom my friend represents.

Need I defend New York? No. It is not necessary. Her deeds herald her fame. Need I defend the attacks made upon her and her citizens of wealth, men of intelligence and character? No. It is not necessary.

Need I remind this Democratic national convention that it is in the great state of New York and in its great city where the wealth that is developed is largely centered? But it is that great city that never has gone in its history gave a Republican majority. When treachery is to be exposed, New York was the Gibraltar of Democracy.

The question which this convention is to decide is which of two policies shall be taken at this time upon the financial question. In a word, the question presented is between international bimetallism and local bimetallism. If there be gold monometallists, they are not represented either in the majority report or in the minority report. I therefore start out with this proposition:

That the Democratic party stands today in favor of gold and silver as the money of the country. We stand in favor of the proposition of a single standard either of gold or silver, but we differ as to the means to bring about that result. These I represent and for whom I speak—the 16 members of the minority committee—claim that we should not attempt the experiment of free and unlimited coinage of silver without the co-operation of other great nations. It is not a question of patriotism. It is not a question of courage. It is not a question of loyalty. It is not a question of value. The majority platform speaks of the subject as though it was simply a question as to whether we were a brave enough people to enter upon this experiment.

Safest and Best Course.

It is a question of business. It is a question of finance. It is a question of economics. It is not a question, notwithstanding, which men ever so brave can solve.

Mr. President, I think these be the safest, the best course for this convention to have pursued was to take the first step forward in the great cause of monetary reform by declaring in favor of international bimetallism.

I am not here to assail the honesty or sincerity of a single man who disagrees with me. There are those around me who know that in every utterance made upon this subject I have treated the friends of free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 with respect. I am here to pursue that course today.

I do not think that we can safely ignore the monetary systems of other great nations. It is a question about which honest men may differ. I believe we cannot ignore the attitude of other nations upon this subject any more than we can their attitude upon the other questions of the day. I know it is said by enthusiastic friends that America can mark out a course for herself. I know that it appeals to the pride of the average American to say that the American does not what other countries may do, we can arrange this matter ourselves. But I beg to remind you that if this suggestion is carried out to its legitimate conclusion you might as well do away with international treaties; you might as well do away with commercial treaties with other countries, you might as well do away with all the provisions in your tariff bills that have relation to the laws of other countries. In this great age, when we are connected with all portions of the earth by our ships, by our cables and by all the modern conveniences, we think that it is unwise to attempt this alone.

Silver Men Go Too Far.

Mr. President, I want to call your attention to this single point. I think it is unwise further for this convention to has ard this contest and declare that the platform does this silver platform provide? It should have contented itself with the single statement that it was in favor of the remonetization of silver and the placing it upon equality with gold, but instead of that your committee has recommended for adoption a platform which asks the vote of Democratic loyalty to hang upon a single ratio, and that 16 to 1.

I doubt the wisdom of having entered into detail. I doubt the propriety of saying that 12½ or 17 is heresy and 16 is the only true Democratic doctrine. Permit me to remind you I am distinguished senators before me who, in the senate of the United States, friends of free silver, have introduced bills for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 20 to 1. I beg to remind this convention that some of your candidates proposed for nomination are men whom I accept, and whose Democracy is admitted, who have voted time and time again in congress for other ratios than 16 to 1, and yet you are proposing to nominate silver men upon a platform that limits and restricts them to one single ratio.

With all due respect, I think it is an unwise step, I think it an unnecessary step, and I think it will reason to plague us in the future.

I think we have too many close business relations with the other great nations of the world to assume this position as to ratio. Your proposed platform says that the policy of gold monometallism is a British policy

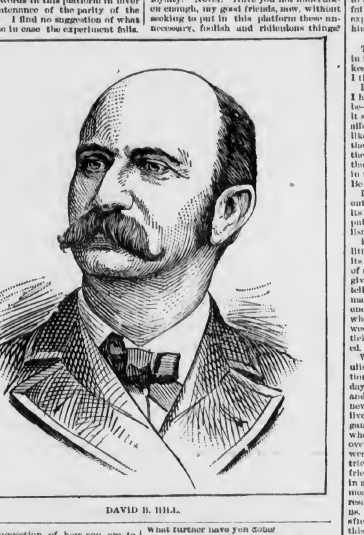
Gold Not England's Policy Alone.

Mr President, they forget to tell the people of this country that it is a French policy also; they forget to tell the people of this country that it is a German policy also; they forget to tell the people of this country that it is a Russian policy also; they fail to remind you that it is a Spanish policy also, and they fail to tell you that it is the policy of the whole number of governments represented in what was called the Latin union. Therefore, I think it looks a little—just a trifle—like demagogy to suggest that this is the policy of a single nation alone. Mr. President, I forget also to see that your platform contains not a single word in favor of international bimetallism, not necessarily inconsistent with this platform, and there is no declaration whatever that it is the policy of the government to attempt to bring it about. The minority platform declares expressly that it is the policy of this government to make speedy efforts to bring this about. It would be wise to do it. We would be wiser to do it. We run no risk upon the great question of the finances of this republic. I do not know that it is the brief time allotted to me, to enter into any elaborate argument upon this question.

What if the Experiment Fails?

I assume that this convention desires, as the people of this country desire, that every silver dollar coined shall be the equal of every other dollar coined.

I find no words in this platform in favor of the maintenance of the parity of the two metals. I find no suggestion of what is to be done in case the experiment fails.



DAVID B. HILL.

Everything is risked upon the mere fact that it shall be given free coinage of the mints. I beg to call your attention to this fact—that, in my humble opinion, the very policy contained by this platform [is the] policy that has kept your greenback currency and your silver dollar at a parity with gold during the past year. We think that times and conditions have changed. We think that you cannot ignore the fact of the great production of silver in this country. We think that you cannot safely ignore the fact in the preparation of a financial system that the cost of the production of silver has greatly fallen. Why it is the very pregnant fact that confronts all the world in the solving of this great question—of the immense discovery of silver everywhere.

The great fact confronts the world that the cost of silver production has been reduced nearly one-half.

Not a Question of Bravery.

If the American people were brave, were courageous, if they had the spirit of 1776, as this platform says, could they, singly and alone, make copper the equal of gold? Could they make lead the equal of gold? Most you not take into consideration the great fact of production, the great fact of the lessening of the cost of production in the last 15 and 20 years?

If bravery, if courage, could produce these results, then you could make any metal, no matter what it might be, the money metal. But I tell you it is a question of economics, a question of business judgment. It is a question of resources, and upon that it is the judgment of the minority of the committee that the safest course is to take the first great step toward international bimetallism and stop there.

I know it will be said that in some particulars this platform agrees with our Republican friends. It is no matter any better nor any worse for it. I call your attention to the fact that your plank upon pensions, that your plank upon the Monroe doctrine, that your plank upon Cuba, that your plank upon territories, that your plank upon Alaska, that your plank even upon the civil service, are exactly the the Republican planks. Therefore I do not think that that criticism will detract from the value of the suggestion.

Mr. President, I ask a few moments ago I thought the safest course for this convention to have pursued was simply to have said that the government would stand by the statute in favor of placing gold and silver alike as the currency of the country and stop there.

I do not think, I said—and I will repeat it—that it is wise to hazard everything upon a single number. Let me go further. I object to various provisions of this platform, and I think if the wise, level, cool headed men, farsighted men, such as is the distinguished senator from Louisiana, who addressed you, had prevailed, that a platform would have been different.

Other Mistakes In the Platform.

What was the necessity for opening up the question of greenback circulation? What was the necessity for putting in this platform as implied pledge that this government might issue greenbacks and make them legal tender? The Democratic party is opposed to paper money. The Democratic party, from its earliest history, has been in favor of hard money.

The Democratic party thinks that the best way for us to do is to eliminate United States notes and treasury notes from your currency. They are a thing upon your metals. You have to constantly keep up[illegible] a fund for their redemption, unless you propose to repudiate them. Therefore, when my friend from South Carolina and my friend from Arkansas say that this platform says what it means and means what it says, I would like to have some one who follows me tell what this platform means upon the subject of the issue of paper money hereafter.

I am not violating, I think, the secrets of the committee room when I say that it was avowed that this government might desire to pursue that course, and this I can attempt at this late day to prevent the Democratic party to the suicidal policy of the issuing of paper money.

You say you wanted a clear and distinct platform. You have not got it upon that question. It cannot be defended successfully.

Another suggestion permit me to make. What was the necessity for putting into the platform other questions which have been settled and made the tests of Democratic loyalty heretofore? Why, we find the disputed question of the policy and constitutionality of an income tax. What has it to do, I ask you, what the followers of James J. Tibien, who during all his life was the opponent of that iniquitous scheme which was used against him in his old age to annoy him and harass him and humiliate him —why, I say, should it be left to this convention to make as a test of Democratic faith relief in the propriety and constitutionality of an income tax. Why was it wise to assail the supreme court of your country?

The Attack on the Supreme Court.

Will some one tell me what that clause means in this platform? Do you mean by what you said and said what you meant, will some one explain that provision? That provision, I say, is susceptible of no means that it is the duty of congress to reconstruct the supreme court of the country. It means—and it means openly avowed—it means the adding of additional members to it, or the turning out of office and reconstructing the whole court. I said I will not follow any such unprecedented step as that. When, ever before in the history of this country, has devotion to an income tax been made the test of Democratic loyalty? Never. Have you not undertaken enough, my great friends, now, without seeking to put in this platform those two necessary, foolish and ridiculous things?

What Further have you Gone?

Policy of the Fathers Upset.

In this platform you have declared, for the first time in the history of this country, that you are opposed to any life tenure whatever for office. Our fathers before us, our Democratic fathers were not so severe, in the establishment of this government gave our court judges a life tenure of office. What necessity was there for reviving this question? How foolish and how unnecessary, in my opinion! Are Democrats whose whole life has been devoted to the service of the party—are men whose hopes, whose ambitions, whose aspirations all lie within party lines—to be driven out of the party upon this new question of life tenure for the judges of our federal courts.

This is a revolutionary step; this is an unwise step; this is an unprecedented step in our party history.

Another question, I think, should have been avoided, and that is this: What was the necessity, what the propriety, of taking up the vexed question of the issue of bonds during the [illegible] of the credit of the nation? Why not leave left this financial question of the free coinage of silver alone?

Repeals the Resumption Act.

What have you declared? You have announced the bold policy that, under ordinary circumstances, shall there ever be a single bond issued in time of peace. You have not asserted anything.

What does that mean? It means the virtual repeal of your resumption act—it means repudiation per se and outright.

This statement is far fetched; the statement is too sweeping; it has been carefully considered. You even oppose congress doing it; you even oppose the people doing it; you oppose them doing it either singly or unitedly; you stand upon the broad proposition that for no purpose, whatever, to protect the currency or not—whether to preserve your national credit, or for any other purpose—there shall not be a bond issued.

Why, how surprising that would be to my Democratic associates in the senate, who for the last two or three years have introduced bill after bill for the issuing of bonds for the Nicaragua canal and other purposes.

No, no, my friends, this platform has not been wisely considered. In your zeal for monetary reform you have gone off the true path—you have turned from the true course, and in your anxiety to build up the silver currency you have unwisely and unjustly put this platform proclamation which cannot stand a fair discussion.

Let me tell you, my friends, without going into a discussion of the bond question proper, which is somewhat foreign to this subject—let me tell you what would be your position if this country were to issue bonds to protect the credit of its government.

Bond Issue Were Unavoidable.

The Democratic party has passed a tariff bill which unfortunately has not produced a sufficient revenue as yet to meet the necessities of the government. There has been a deficit of some $50,000,000 a year. It is hoped that in the near future this bill will produce ample revenues for the support of the government, but in the meantime your greenback currency and your treasury notes must be redeemed when they are presented if you would preserve the name and the credit of the nation.

Where would the money have come from if your president and your southern secretary of the treasury had not discharged their duty to the bonding of bonds to save the credit of the country?

Let me call your attention to the figures. There has been issued during this administration $262,000,000 of bonds. What

LAUGHTER.

Was It Provoked From the Brutal Yell Over a Tortured Enemy?

Just as the head of the house is the remnant of an original fortune, just as the pith and marrow of the bone would be the survival of a prehistoric age on the top of the head, so, perhaps, this levity in regard to particular ailments on others may be the lingering remnant of an aboriginal ferocity in man. It is a well known theory that what we call humor are often the same nerves that in the first human beings broke over the restraints of fear and gave vent to the animal's delight at getting a meal, or at the misery of a tortured enemy.

There is in this day something terrible in laughter. The laugh of madness or of cruelty is a sound more awful than that of the bitterest lamentations.

By means of that strange photograph that we call literature we can listen even now to the laughter of the dead, to the hearty guffaws or cynical titters of huge men who lived in the days of the bygone men and women, and if we are curious in such matters we can probe into the nature of the clumsy cruelties that passed under the fashion of men's humor. For it has been humor in the past, for the support of weighty cumulative evidence, that, as we penetrate further into the past, we find the sense of humor decidedly more severe and more grossly and solely upon the enjoyment of the pain, misfortune, or vilification or embarrassment of others. The sense of superiority was the cause of laughter in the past; or, in other words, savage by lay at the root of this, as of most other attributes of our humanness specied.

Following, as does our phonograph, we catch the echoes of a savage and merry tumult; boisterous, cruel, often brutal, yet with here and there a tender cadence from some solitary voice; and presently this tumult grows stronger and sweeter, as we travel slowly toward our time, until at length, through all the merriment, we can hear the soft undermurmur of pipes, the faint picture to seize the imagination—the long laughter of the ages which begins in cruelty and ends in love?—Westminster Review.

FREAK FACTORIES.

Showmens Have No Trouble In Providing New Attractions.

"How do you manage to find new freaks and curiosities?" was the question asked of the manager of a traveling show that had pitched its tent in a London suburb.

"Don't have to find them," was the laconic answer. "They find us. The freak business keeps regularly established as my other and has its wholesale and retail firms, traveling salesmen, brokers, price lists, factories"—

"Factories?" queried the reporter, aghast.

"Why, certainly, factories, of course. The freak business is divided into about three varieties—foreign, domestic and fake.

"In the first class the collectors travel all over the world in search of rarities, but the very best freaks come from India and the Malay archipelago. In these countries there are people who breed freaks. They buy young children and animals and deform them while their bones are soft and pliable, and young. Then they are constantly on the outlook for genuine natural freaks, and in the lands the birth of a freak occurs very frequently. The headquarters of this business is at Singapore.

"Then there are any number of men who devote themselves to the discovering and placing of freaks of all kinds and varieties. Here in London the dingy goss ly that we do not receive packages of photographs and illustrated circulars from some freak merchant or other.

"Of course there are the faked freak men—a perfect host in the business. If the proprietor of some little show needs the additional attraction and does not have the money to hire one, he goes and—for, like everything else, freaks have their price—he can get something for little money that will serve his purpose.

"The real freak men here [make always command high prices and travel all over the world in order to exhibit themselves. Most of them have regular routes mapped out by their audience agents, just like theatrical companies, and they only appear at a place at long intervals they never get stale, and sometimes make bigger hits on their second or third appearance than on their first."—London Mail.

Big Prizes Paid by Magazines.

Fabulous prices are sometimes paid for the sensational features in the magazines. A writer who claims to speak with full knowledge of the facts claims that Cosmopolitan magazine paid $50,000 for its "Life of Lincoln," $18,000 for the serial rights to Mrs. Humphry Ward's novel, "Sir George Tressady;" from $2500 to $3000 for Rudyard Kipling's verses, according to size. Charles Scribner's Sons paid J. M. Barrie $25,000 for the serial rights to "Sentimental Tommie;" Robert Louis Stevenson received $7,000 for one of the stories sold to the McClure syndicate. Other and equally remarkable prices are not lacking. Success in literature nowadays means money just as certainly as does success in other pursuits. It's all in the name and the fame.—Family Call.

The Swiss Army.

The Swiss army is complete in every detail, it is said, the medical, veterinary and commissariat departments being thoroughly organized, and this in spite of the fact that the average cost of a soldier is only $7 a year. The effective forces number an effective total of 137,640 men; in the landwehr there are 80,000 more, and in the landsturm 270,000. Besides, owing to the encouragement given by the state to such institutions as the Societes de Tir, nearly every man in the country knows how to handle a rifle and is more or less of a marksman. Switzerland is not at the present moment to put into the field and maintain an army of 150,000 men at least, properly found and equipped. When the country can muster a force 300,000 of his house, he may be said to be in full marching order, for he keeps his entire kit, rifle—knapsack and cloak—in his home, and every man takes an honest pride in having everything in good condition.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A DREAM DREAMED OVER.

The music was throbbing and pulsing;
The flowers, and lilies, palms, and the light
In smooth, waxed floors were reflected
That glowed and grew bright
With the fragrance of cultured her.
Is he pleased, now we're to-gether,
She sang, as he whirled to the waltz,
"The prettiest girl in town?"

She smiled and flushed and denied it,
As a pretty girl must do,
But by her charmed eyes she confessed it
She knew that he thought it true.
And the chord of the thrilling sentiment
He, his was rapture to-day—
When he was the prettiest girl in town,
And he owned her for his own.

They parted with anguished sorrow;
Time cleared the clouded sky,
But at last night's ball she heard again
In the elegant days gone by,
His soul and her daughter were dancing.
The pride of the season, they,
And she heard him say as they passed her,
"You're the prettiest girl in town!"

HOW GUNPOWDER IS MADE.

The Part That Each of the Three Ingredients Plays.

Gunpowder has steadily developed as mechanical skill constructed better and better weapons in which to use it, until today it has reached a perfection of manufacture for various purposes which allows its effects to be foretold in any weapon, even to the time it takes a grain to burn and to the distance it will drive a ball.

Right from it a gunpowder was made of saltpeter, sulphur and charred wood. Saltpeter is chemically called niter and is a natural product found bedded in the earth in all the tropical parts of the world, chiefly in India and China. Sulphur, too, is found in a natural state in many volcanic countries, like Sicily, while, as well as in the form of several mineral woods or woody substances by heating them almost to a burning heat in an airtight vessel, thus driving off everything in the air but carbon.

Saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal are still the only ingredients of the gunpowder in common use, although a new gunpowder made of different materials is now having successful experiment. A mixture of saltpeter and charcoal alone would form an explosive, and sulphur is added chiefly to make it granular or powdered, so that it can be pressed into cakes and shapes. All three ingredients have to be purified by the most careful chemical skill before they are combined. Then an exact proportion of each has to be measured out according to the kind of powder to be made.

For the gunpowder generally used you would find in every 100 pounds, if you could separate the ingredients, 75 pounds of saltpeter, 15 pounds of charcoal and 10 pounds of sulphur, but it would be almost impossible to separate the ingredients, for they are not merely mixed together as you might mix pepper and salt, but they are ground and rolled and stirred and pressed together by special machines until they are almost indistinctly united to form a single new substance.

This mixing process is called trituration, and the powder is thus made into the form of big flat cakes, called press cakes, and then broken up and screened into grains of special sizes, or ground to the fine powder used for shotguns and revolvers. The large grained powders are still further stirred together until the grains become highly glazed, and these are called cannon powders. A lighted match may be held to a grain of cannon powder and it will be found almost impossible to set it on fire, but once kindled it flashes off very suddenly and violently.—Lieutenant John M. Ellicott in St. Nicholas.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Guderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife." While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. We took it in hand and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Short & Haynes' drug store Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Spoons Free to All.

I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Stallon A, St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant plated hook spoon to any one sending her six 2-cent stamps I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends, and made $13 in two hours, taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity. We need a spoon for the dish or cooking vessel, being held in the place by a hook on the back. The spoon is something housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were first invented. Any one can get a sample spoon by sending six 2 cent stamps to Miss Fritz. This is a splendid way to make money around home. Very truly, Farseeing Sentchwoman.

It would probably take many generations of such shrewd and unbreakable adversity to train Americans into the farseeing thriftiness of the Scotch. An illustration of this thrift is contained in the story of a Sentchwoman who had been promised a present of a new bonnet by a lady. Before she made the purchase, the lady called and asked the good woman:

"Would you rather have a felt or a straw bonnet, Mrs. Wilson?"

"Well," said Mrs. Wilson, "I think I'll tak' a straw ane. It'll maybe be a wee bit cooler in the simmer. I'm done wi' it!"—Youth's Companion.

Eczema All Her Life.

Mr. E. D. Jenkins, of Lithonia, Ga., says that his daughter, Ida, inherited a severe case of Eczema, which the usual mercury and potash remedies failed to relieve. Year by year she was treated with various medicines, external applications and internal remedies, without result. Her sufferings were intense and her condition grew steadily worse. All the so-called blood remedies did not seem to reach the disease at all until S. S. S. was given, when an improvement was at once noticed. The medicine was continued with favorable results, and now she is cured sound and well, her skin is perfectly clear and purified and she has been saved from what threatened to blight her life forever.

GARFIELD

Rev. Bozarth Is Preaching in the Grove — Mrs. Fanny Board Is Dangerously Ill—Other Notes.

Miss Effie Hook is visiting in Hardinsburg.

Mrs. F. M. Board is very sick at this writing.

Mrs. Dempsey Morris, who has been sick for several weeks, is much improved.

Dr. Milner, of Union Star, visited Mrs. F. M. Board Sunday with Dr. A. M. Kinchelow.

Miss Flora Smith, of Hardinsburg, is at her cousin's, Mrs. Minnie Gregory's for a two-week's visit.

Mrs. Patsy Macy, who has been confined to her bed for nearly a year, cannot live but a few days.

Master Irvie Richardson returned home Monday from Owensboro where he had been visiting friends.

What did we understand caused the Sunday School to cease at this place? I do think we should have a good Sunday School.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Webb made a trip to Webster Thursday with their daughter, Ollie to see Dr. Parks in behalf of her health.

Masters Earl and Verner Mattingly have returned from Hawesville where they have spent several weeks with their grand-parents.

We are asked to inform the members of Freedom church that Rev. Bailey, a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher, will be there the second Sunday in August.

Mrs. Eddie May, Misses Ada Meader, Bettie Eskridge and Florence Payne, of Harned Station, spent Wednesday the guests of Mrs. Andy Hook and daughters.

Little Miss Mary Gregory showed her kindness and thoughtfulness by carrying flowers to cheer up the sick room of Mrs. Fannie M. Board. Even the little ones care for the sick.

The many friends and relatives of Mrs. Fannie Board have called at her bedside for the last two weeks to aid and assist her in her very bad illness. Mrs. Board bore her illness patiently and we hope for a speedy recovery.

Remember—only such medicines were admitted for exhibition at the World's Fair as are accepted for use, by physicians, in the practice of medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and Ayer's Pills being included in the list. They are standard medicines.

Andrew Dye Will Go to Missouri—Kick Against Checkers—Death of Miss Emma Wheeler

The health of the community continues unsatisfactory.

B. A. Parks sold some of his fine fowls to parties at Hardinsburg to be delivered this week

Mr. J. C. Wheeler returned to Louisville last Friday. Mrs. Wheeler will remain here some time visiting.

Mr. Bruner, Elizabethtown, bought a nice bunch of lambs in this section to be delivered at Garfield the last day of July.

Harry Norton and Forrest Claycomb, Webster, passed through here Thursday buying hogs to consume their immense corn crop.

The picture agent following up the view artist, Mr. Dulan, of Winchester, came along Saturday delivering some splendid work.

Add now the roads are being worked. We do hope that the overseers will have all the loose rock removed from the roads before they pronounce them worked.

Checkers is a scientific game, and a game occasionally is very nice, but our rising young men are making it a nuisance. We will venture the assertion that there has been enough time frittered away with checkers and pitching horseshoes at Clifton this season, if properly employed on the farm, to have made provision sufficient for their large families. For this reason alone, no public business house should allow a checker board to be used.

Miss Emma Wheeler, who we reported in our last week's items as being dangerously ill, died on the 21st inst., and was conveyed to the family burying ground on the next day near Rome, Ind., and laid to rest as designated and requested by her. She retained the control of her mind and speech until the last breath, and talked freely with all those present. After exchanging a perfect willingness to die, she bade all goodbye with consoling words that shall ever be remembered by those present, and her spirit took its flight to the God that gave it. "Blessed are they who die in the Lord, for their works do follow them." Our little town and community mourns the loss of such a useful and estimable lady, but what is our loss is her eternal gain; and as we all have to meet death sooner or later, the writer cannot suggest any better motto, and it would be wise while in health to prepare to meet thy God. She had resided here with her mother twenty years last April and to her she has ever been kind and devoted. She was a faithful member of Clifton C. P. church for eight years. Had she lived until August she would have been thirty-eight years of age.

Nora Lain Dead

On last Wednesday evening at six o'clock the Angel of Death visited this community and claimed as its victim one of our brightest jewels, Miss Nora Lain, a woman of excellent merits, a kind disposition and a true follower of Christ.

Miss Lain was the eldest daughter of D. J Phillips, and was married October, 1895, to Mr. Rete Lain. Their union was blessed with one sweet little girl, Verna Myrtle, age fifteen months, who is now deprived forever of a dear mother's love and guidance through this rugged life.

How hard it is for us to submit to God's will and say "He doeth all things for the best." Yet we know not the cause of his wondrous works, and console ourselves knowing it is He Who despairs not of our loved ones; and He alone can heal our broken hearts. Mrs. Lain professed faith in Christ when seventeen years of age and united with the Lyonia Baptist church, from which place her funeral was preached July 19th at 2 o'clock p. m. by Rev. H. W. Morton, of Paradise, Ky., in which her remains were borne by a large concourse of relatives and friends to the grave yard near by, and laid quickly away beneath the sod in its last restling place.

She bore her long continued illness of five months with great fortitude, never known to murmur or complain and often expressed herself willing and ready to go, whenever the Angels beckoned her to come up Higher

Mrs. Lain had so lived as to endear herself to all who knew her, and how we loath to say she is no more here upon this land and that our meetings are ended until we meet to part no more, on the bright golden shore. May her poor heart-broken husband be comforted in knowing she is at rest in peace with God, free from all pain and woe, and that he and Verna some day can meet Nora where parting is no more.

May God comfort the poor bereaved ones, and strengthen them so as to raise the dear little baby aright. Though it has no mother, it is left in loving and tender hands that shall strive to do their best for Verna.

Dearest Nora, thou hast left us,
And thy loss we deeply feel,
But God has broken thy bonds to free us,
He alone our sorrows can heal.

"My mother, my wife and myself use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy whenever troubled with a cough or cold. It is the medicine of our home. I do not know how we could do without it. We feel that it is an indispensable article. The people in this vicinity too are beginning to learn of the merits of this excellent medicine. I never lose an opportunity to testify to its value for it has saved many a doctor's bill in my family."—A. Musser, proprietor of the Musser House, Wilhelm, Pa." This remedy is famous for its cures of bad colds. Try it and you too will recommend it to your friends. For sale by A. R. Fisher, druggist.

Unintentional Serenade

It should not be imagined for a moment that these fair and accomplished Kentucky beauties have been out serenading Hoosier editors. It just so happens that Mr. Willett's residence is in the neighborhood of the editor's garret quarters, and the evening zephyrs waft the sweet Arcline strains from Mr. Willett's parlor winbows through the editors open sky-lights as he slumbers on his humble cot and dreams of the oriental pleasures he reads about.

The Leavenworth (Ind.) Register says: "There is nothing on earth so charming and inspiring to humanity as good music—either vocal or instrumental. There is a time when it penetrates the ear with more force than others, and that time is just after you have retired for the evening, more particularly if it be rendered by parties who understand the science of combining harmonical sounds so as to make it pleasing to the ear. Such music can be heard at the residence of Mr. R. H. Willett rendered by Misses Agnes Mallin and Pearl Hitto of Ihardinburg, Ky. who are spending the week with their friend Miss R. H. Willett."

Some time ago the one-year-old child of Mr. M. E. Lindsay, of Franklin Forks, Pa., had a very severe attack of colic. She suffered great pain. Mr. Lindsay gave her a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in ten minutes her distress was gone. This is the best medicine in the world for children when troubled with colic or diarrhoea. It never fails to effect a prompt cure. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant for them to take. It should be kept in every home, especially during the summer months. For sale by A. R. Fisher, druggist.

POWDER FOR CANNON.

A Mixture That Will Burn Slowly Is Necessary For Big Ordnance.

The great trouble with powder in cannon was soon found to be that it exerted all its force too suddenly, so that all the strain came on one end of the gun. When gunpowder is set on fire, it turns suddenly into gas, and the gas needs about 300 times the space that the solid powder has to occupy. The action of ordinary gunpowder is so sudden that for a moment that part of the gun around the powder charge has to hold the big volume of gas squeezed down under enormous pressure until the shot can make a start to get out of the gun and make room for the gas. If, therefore, gunpowder could be made which would burn a little slower, so that it would not all be burned until the shot reached the muzzle, the gas would be more gradually formed and the strain would not have to be found on the gun. Such a powder was first made in Germany and was first called cocoa powder, because it resembled in color and general appearance the cocoa of chocolate. Its method of manufacture was kept secret, but other countries analyzed the grains and soon learned to make it even better than Germany. It was made partly by changing the proportions of the ingredients, making them about 79 per cent saltpeter, 3 per cent sulphur and 18 per cent charcoal, but mainly by using as materials for the charcoal those giving the powder its peculiar color. Thus there arose a division of gunpowder into quick and slow burning powders.

It was not alone necessary to make a powder which would burn more slowly, but if possible to make one burn so that more gas would be made as the end of the shot got near the muzzle than was forming when it started from the breech, because there is more room behind the shot when it nears the muzzle, and it therefore takes more gas to keep up the same pressure against its base.

To accomplish this and to make the grains be so that there should be spaces evenly distributed among them to allow the flame to reach every grain at once, causing all of them to begin running together, grains were made of regular shapes, and much time was spent to see how nearly it gave the desired results. Thus there have been used round grains, square grains, sphero-hexagonal grains, spindle-shaped grains and prismatic grains. Of course it is impossible to make a grain which will have more and more surface to burn the smaller it gets, so the best result which has thus far been attained is only an approach to it, and this is obtained with a hexagonal prismatic grain about 1 inch high and 1¼ inches in diameter, with a hole or several holes through it. —Lieutenant John M. Ellicott in St. Nicholas.

Surgery In the Middle Ages.

In the middle of the twelfth century priests were the only doctors. By an edict of the ecumenical council surgery was separated from medicine and the practice of the former forbidden to the clergy. The latter then employed their barbers to perform sargical operations. This arose from the fact that the monks having their heads shaved frequently and observing the dexterity acquired by the barbers in the use of edge tools. The knights of the period were also shaved and bled-ing, passed on to tooth drawing and finally to other operations requiring skill and deftness, if not much knowledge. They knew practically nothing of anatomy. It is said surgery was denied to the clergy by a canon of the church which forbade them to shed blood. This was considered quite dark age of medicine, and somber indeed it must have been to the worthy citoyen who, perhaps, placing himself in the hands of his barber for relief, might, at the same time find he was getting rid of a tumor, also part company with his head.—Exchange.

The Pull of a Fish.

"What I want," said an angler, "is a rigging of some sort to measure the pull of a fish. If a pound fish pulls 3 pounds 3 ounces, I want to know it, and if a 3 pound fish pulls only 3 pounds 6 ounces I want to know that too. A joker wrote to a sportsman's paper the other day to tell of an invention for measuring the pull of the fish that are lost. That is where this pull measure machine would be good too. It would have to be self registering, of course.

"Everybody laughs when any one says he lost a big one. I've lost fish of a size I never dared tell of just because of the bad name a fellow gets for telling of such things. I could tell of 6 and 7 pound trout in Cancehogula lake up in the Adirondacks, but what's the use? Why, say, I've seen a trout"— Just then he remembered himself and began to talk about a grizzly king fly with a yellow tail.—New York Sun

Controlled by Watches.

Paul du Chaillu, the African explorer, tells how he once controlled a race of savage cannibals while he was on the dark continent. He had a number of Waterbury watches, and by letting completely misplaced the savages and caused them to regard him as a spirit. He made a practice of leaving one of these watches in a village when he left stopped. After awhile the watch, of course, ran down and stopped, and the cannibals said that the spirits had gone to overtake their master. When Du Chaillu returned to these villages, he always got the watch that he had left behind him and, unobserved, wound it up again. The natives heard the ticking continuously, and thought that the explorer was a spirit and did their utmost to please him.

DAWFUSKIE ISLAND.

IT HAS A HISTORY AS THE SCENE OF MANY INDIAN STRUGGLES.

Its Extreme Southeastern Point of South Carolina—The Tragedy of Bloody Point, That Wiped Out a Whole Tribe of Indians.

A new candidate for public favor is Dawfuskie island, one of the islands not far distant from Savannah and one of the most interesting historically. Dawfuskie is the Indian name of the island. It is some six miles in length and four miles in width, noted for its fine oysters and shade and famous of late years for its deer hunting. The Indians were very partial to it—that is, judging from the mounds, tomahawks, arrowheads and other relics of that character which are said to be found on the island. It is the southeasternmost point of South Carolina, and directly opposite Tybee island, and in what was formerly known as St. Luke's parish, Beaufort district, but now legally designated as Yemassee township, Beaufort county.

The island was at one time the property of the Mongin family, who settled it about 1750, and up to the beginning of the late war it was divided into several plantations and had a population, in addition to the planters' families, of about 1,500 slaves. Several places on the island are still owned by the descendants of the Mongins, Bloody Point by Mr. Mongin Stoddard and Melrose by Mr. Alfred H. Steddard.

The following story of Dawfuskie is lind uppeared in The Morning News of June 24, 1876, and in all of its early history that can be found:

"The massacre of Bloody Point, though previous to the Revolutionary war, is still interesting as relating to the ancient history of St. Luke. The islands of Port Royal and St. Helena were pretty thickly settled with white population when Hilton Head, Bow Hanky, Pinckney and the other neighboring islands were held in possession by a few isolated Indians or were altogether uninhabited. They formed a kind of neutral ground between the white and red men. The Indians from Georgia were in the habit of making frequent inroads upon the white settlements, killing the inhabitants and carrying off whatever plunder they could gather, to their remoter homes in the further south. They formed large war parties and would proceed as far north as Hilton Head. Here they would skulk about till a fair chance offered, when they would cross Broad river and ravage the neighboring settlements; hence the name of Skulk creek (and not Skull, as is now written).

"The Indians were in the habit of returning to Skulk creek after these incursions and would there pursuit among its numerous nooks and windings. Upon one of these occasions, after having committed a number of murders and having loaded their canoes with whatever plunder they were able to collect, having secured a quantity of "fire water," it is presumed, from the sequel, they passed through Skulk creek on their return south without stopping in their old haunts and never halted until they reached Daw Dusky, where they thought the pale face would be beyond the reach of the whites.

"A very strong and determined party of whites went in pursuit of them. On reaching Hilton Head they learned from a few Indians of a friendly tribe that their enemies had not halted, but had proceeded on south. Having induced these friendly Indians to join them as guides, they continued their pursuit further south. When they had gone on as far as Daw Dusky, they discovered from the smoke of their camp that the Indians had halted at the southeast point of the island. The whites landed on the northwest portion and marched toward their enemies. The Indians had put all their boats a short distance above the bluff now known as New river, to avoid the surf which breaks upon the point. The Indians were at the extreme point, enjoying themselves in an unwonted round of conviviality and feasting. The whites approached cautiously and stealthily, and, having got between the Indians and their boats, effectually cut off their retreat. A shower of bullets was the first intimation they had of the presence of an enemy. They were shot down, bayoneted, sabered and were finally driven into the sea.

"The surprise was complete; the massacre was dreadful; the white sands were crimsoned with blood, and the earth was strewn with wounded, dying and dead. A few, very few, escaped by swimming, some to the opposite marsh, and one swam entirely over to Tybee, a distance of three miles. From the deadful carnage at this spot it received the name of Bloody Point, which it retains to this time, it being the extreme southeastern point of South Carolina. After this decisive victory the settlements to the north of Broad river received no further molestation from the southern Indians, and soon after Hilton Head itself ceased to be settled by the whites. The Indians who escaped, having collected after a lapse of some time, returned to Hilton Head, and, finding only two of the tribe who had guided the whites in their pursuit, avenged the downfall of their own tribe by destroying both of them. They then returned south and were lost sight of ever after. Such is the tradition in St. Luke's."—Savannah News.

AN AMUSING DEBATE.

The Subject Was Serious Enough, but the Situation Was Comical.

When, in the old days of trouble between the English and French, there was talk of sending Admiral Hawke to sea to keep watch over the enemy's fleet, there occurred a notable interview. It was November. The weather was stormy and dangerous for fleets and the government was not agreed as to sending them out.

Mr. Pitt, who was in bed with gout, was obliged to receive those who had business with him in his chamber. This room had two beds and no fire. The Duke of Newcastle came to him to consider the sending out of the fleet, and they presently entered the room when he found out, shivering all over with cold.

"How is this? No fire?"

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the gout, I cannot bear one."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the invalid's bedside and began talking, but he found himself unable to endure the cold.

"Pray allow me!" he exclaimed suddenly, and, without taking off his cloak, he hurled himself in the other bed and disappeared the counterpane. He was strongly opposed to risking the fleet in the November gales. Mr. Pitt was absolutely resolved that it should put to sea, and both argued the matter with much warmth. It was the only warmth, indeed, in the room.

"I am positively determined that the fleet shall sail," said Pitt, accompany his words with the most lively gesticulations.

"It is impossible! It will perish!" said the duke, with equal emphasis.

And at the moment the dignified, sacred hottest mother dignitary of the realm came in and found it difficult to keep his countenance at the sight of two of the most deliberating on matters of grave importance from such a novel situation.

The fleet did put to sea, and Mr. Pitt's judgment proved to be right. The enemy were crippled and a signal advantage gained.—Youth's Companion.

Ben Wade on Davis.

When Ben Wade of Ohio was the presiding officer of the senate, he used occasionally to call some senator to take the chair and, retiring himself by walking up and down in the lobby which runs back of the senate chamber. Once while thus walking he was overtaken by a certain Kentucky senator from one of the southern states, who occupied the identical chair that Jefferson Davis had used while a member of the senate. Walking along by the side of Wade, he rubbed his back wearily and said: "Wade, these senate chairs are the most uncomfortable things I ever saw. My back is positively breaking. I am getting in mine." Wade looked at him for a moment, and, as he turned away, muttered, "Davis left enough brains in the seat of that chair to blister the backs of two or three such as you are."—San Francisco Argonaut.

When They Began to Write.

It is astonishing the number of successful writers who were well on in years before they even thought of adopting literature as a profession. Thomas Hardy was 40 before he began to give his attention to story telling. George Eliot was 40 before she wrote a line of fiction, having no faith in her powers as a story teller. Thomas Carlyle was 35 before he thought of writing verse. Jules Verne was 35 before he wrote his first story. Rider Haggard started at 21; Mr. Barrie and Kipling at 27; Grant Allen at 29, and Sir Walter Besant and Mr. G. Manville Fenn at 30. George Meredith was nearly 33 when he began to write stories in his own peculiar style.—New York Tribune.

He—Why, we've got a cricket in the house. Isn't it cheerful?

She—Yes. And so intelligent. Hear him talking about the furniture. How did they do it, he says. "Cheap, cheap!"

However, as she had been that day on a visit to her sister, whose husband was getting $18 a week, while her own dear new hubby got but $14, perhaps that statement was excusable.—Indianapolis Journal.

Danger Signals

More than half the victims of consumption do not know they have it. Here it is list of symptoms by which consumption can certainly be detected—

Cough, one or two slight efforts on rising, occurring during the day and frequently during the night.

Short breathing after exertion.

Tightness of the chest.

Chilliness in the evening, followed by Slight fever.

Perspiration toward morning and Pale face and languor in the morning.

Loss of vitality.

If you have these symptoms, or any of them, do not delay. There are many preparations which claim to be cures, but Dr. Acker's English Remedy for Consumption has the highest endorsements, and has stood the test of years. It will arrest consumption in its earlier stages, and drive away the symptoms named. It is manufactured by the Acker Medicine Co., 16 and 18 Chambers St., New York, and sold by all reputable druggists.

ON THE BRIDGE.

Perfection lies
In sweetheart's eyes;
Her cheeks would shame a rose.
How her hair,
But I can't bear
The bridge on sweetheart's nose.

It initiates
Her noble traits,
And strength of purpose shows.
But rivals seem
And others scorn
The bridge on sweetheart's nose.

If I should feign
A deep disdain
For her, do you suppose
That tears of hate
Would overwhelm
The bridge on sweetheart's nose?

I think indeed
You see I dread
To add to sweetheart's woes)
I'll venture this:
I'll fondly kiss
The bridge on sweetheart's nose

And warmly praise
Her gentle ways
And boast my scorn for those
Who worship not
That beauty spot—
The bridge on sweetheart's nose.

THE LOST WAS FOUND.

The House Number Looked Strange Because the Transom Was Tipped.

If any one had told him he was drunk, he would not have resented it, but he would have made an effort to maintain his equilibrium and dignity long enough to explain that he was only a little sleepy. He lived in a flat on the third floor at 206 Irvington street, and that his residence was on the right hand side as he wabbled along homeward. The uncertain light of early dawn, combined with the blear in his eyes, rendered it necessary for him to stop in front of every house and gravely brace himself against the railings until he could focus his eyesight on the number.

Finally he identified his house, but after arguing with himself for a couple of minutes he came to the conclusion that he was just woozy enough to make mistakes possible, so to be absolutely certain he balanced himself against the front fence and studied the number on the transom. Instead of 206 he saw 209. He rubbed his eyes and looked again, but the number had not changed. It was still 209. Then he wondered how it happened that he had got on the wrong side of the street and three blocks too far out, made a zigzag across the street and started back, but before he had walked three blocks he came to the end of the street.

The weary pilgrim was bewildered. He couldn't understand it, but getting his directions shaped his course up the street on the right side and kept on until he came to 209 again. He studied it from every possible point of view, even trying to stand on his head to read it, but it perversely remained 209.

Utterly bewildered, he sat down on the steps and waited till a policeman came along.

"I'm losht," he explained. "I want'er go to 209 Irvington street."

"This is the place, right here," declared the officer.

"Can't be. Thish is 509."

"No, it ain't. It's 206, but the transom is turned over."

The many friends here of Mr. and Mrs. Beavin join the News in extending heartfelt sympathy, in this, their dark hour of distress

"Delay" Beavin says: This is the worst time to argue politics I ever saw Why I will be just spreading my self to some fellow from out in the country, thinking that I am just playind h-l generally with this free silver craze, as they call it, when he will ask me a few questions and I get all tangled up. Then I soon discover that the jay knows more about this money question than I do."

The Harvest Home picnic given at Stephensport last Saturday was a splendid success, financially, socially and in every other way. The Hon. W. E. Minor and young Mr. Adkinson told some truths about the political issues of the day, while Stuart's band filled up the intervening hours with their most charming music. It was a delightful day and everybody present so expressed themselves, especially the Cloverport crowd.

A large crowd was in town last Thursday to attend the trial of James Cretchfield and Pete Ballman for fighting Judge Gregory's search and County Attorney Miller had the case transferred to Hardinsburg. The fight occurred at McGavock's School house one night about two weeks ago, and Ballman got out pretty badly with a knife, one of his cheeks being laid open for three inches The belligerents are both youths, but will it is said there was a woman in the case.

Buck Harrington and that same mule had a cleaner job of it this time. They were out with the laundry last Saturday afternoon delivering laundry, when the mule concluded to cut another caper. He started about the Napper Hotel around on Second street, and came sailing in Poplar to Wall. Up Wall street he came till the wagon struck a locust tree at the edge of the sidewalk just above Fralic's store. All that was left of the wagon and harness in one piece was the whip Buck, knowing the nature of the mule jumped out early in the action and was not injured.

"Several weeks ago," he says, "I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after using less than one-third of the contents the results were magical—effecting an entire cure. I heartily and cheerfully recommend the remedy to all suffering from diarrhoea." This remedy is for sale by A. R Fisher, druggist.

ANOTHER WRECK

On the Texas Causes One Man To Be Severely Injured and Others Slightly Hurt.

As the L. H. & St. L. east bound local freight was nearing Owensboro last Monday morning they struck a cow, and the engine and three or four cars left the track.

It was engine 14 with E. H. Zirkel engineer and Frank Hall fireman, both residents of this city.

The engine kept an upright position and ran about fifty feet on the ties and ground before she stopped. The engineer reversed the engine and jumped for his life, and suffered a severely sprained ankle. The fireman was out on the running board at the time, and he did not jump, but held to the engine and escaped with slight injury. The calf of one leg and his face were bruised and skinned, but he does not know how it happened nor by what he was struck.

The worst injured man was the front brakeman, James Stites. He was on a flat-car loaded with logs, and when his companion found him he was sitting on the car with both legs broken and the logs were all unloaded. The remainder of the crew were nuinjured.

The east-bound passenger was delayed four hours by the wreck, but it brought Zirkel and Hall home. Stites injuries may prove fatal, though there are possible chances for recovery.

LATER—Stites died yesterday morning

Katie and Frank Stith, children from the Masonic Home, Louisville, after spending several weeks with their aunt, Mrs. T. P. Hardaway, went to Sirocco Saturday to visit relatives there.

Little kindnesses and attentions from one's friends in every day life give the heart a warm, satisfied feeling that sweetens this life. The beauty of the flower and fiueness of the fruit give pleasure, but the friendship of which they are a token, is the lasting benefit.

The entertainment, which is progressing so nicely at Hite's Run, will be given Friday night, Aug 7. I am satisfi d it will be a success.

The farmers of this section are getting as busy for a threshing machine to come in for their oat crop is damaging on account of so much rain.

Mrs. Holmes, of Evansville, Ind., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs Jas Johnson, of this place, went to Hardinsburg Sunday and will be the guest of Judge Wm. Ahl and family for a few days.

The trustees and patrons of this district met Saturday for the purpose of coming to some conclusion as to whether there should be a tax voted in this district or build a house by sul scription. They acted wise and agreed that a tax would be best, and so we will have a good house, something we have needed for some time.

Leavening Power—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE SPIRIT OF TORYISM.

Has Always Existed in Opposition to Democracy—For Plutocrats to Kick is Nothing New.

The cry of alarm which the organs of the money power have raised in the present campaign is not without its precedent in the early days of the republic.

When Thomas Jefferson first enunciated the principles of the democratic party, he was openly denounced by the members of the opposing party who charged him with plotting the destruction of the government.

Having just returned from France, where he represented this country in a diplomatic capacity, he was accused of having imbibed the spirit of the French revolution and of being a man entirely too dangerous to be trusted.

Jefferson, however, laid the foundation of a national prosperity such as this country has never before enjoyed.

When Andrew Jackson made his appearance in public life he was assailed by every vicious term which could be found in the vocabulary of abuse. The administration of Jackson, however, not only inaugrated an era of prosperity, but it placed the goverment on such a firm financial basis that public confidence could not be disturbed.

Every great reform movement brings out a spirit of toryism which vents itself in foul prediction of disaster. But in spite of these predictions the country prospers

The New York Journal, in a recent editorial, calls attention to the fact that two of its contemporaries, The Evening post and The Commercial Advertiser, have been in existence for something over a hundred years, and that among their own files could be found the charges which the organs of the money power in those days had buried against the democratic party.

Referring to these files, The Journal says:

In the campaign of 1800 "Marcellus" supposed to be Hamilton, predicted in The Commercial Advertiser that Jefferson, if elected, would turn out every Federalist office holder, "thumble the financial system of the country into ruin at one stroke," and thus of necessity stop all payment of interest on the public debt and bring on "universal bankruptcy and beggary." He would dismantle the navy, so that "every vessel which Britain from our shores would be plundered or captured." The scarred veterans of the revolution, deprived of their pensions, would be seen "starving in the street, or living on the cold and precarious supplies of charity." The officers of the government, unable to collect their salaries, would resign and counterfeiting would be practiced with impunity.

Subsequent events proved these predictions to be utterly without foundation. The policy of Mr. Jefferson was radical but strictly American, and it eventuated in unbroken national prosperity.

Continuing this discussion, The Journal observes:

Even after Jefferson's election the alarmists continued their gloomy predictions for a time. The Evening Post, which from its very earliest days have had the habit of collecting its valuable opinions in pamphlet form, putting them on sale in its counting room, and then suppressing them when it finds it advisable to alter its course, attacked his first message in a series articles signed "Lucius Crassus." The verdict of Crassus, otherwise The Post, was that

The passage of the president, by whatever motive it may have been dictated, is a performance which ought to alarm all who are anxious for the safety of our government, for the respectability and welfare of our nation. It makes are aware at making a most prodigious sacrifice of constitutional energy, of sound principle and of public interest to the popularity of one man."

The malicious flings which the organs of the money power have made at Mr. Bryan in this campaign are no more reprehensible than those which were made at Mr. Jefferson in the early part of the century. Just as the cause of the people triumphed under Jefferson, and subsequently under Jackson, so it will triumph in the present campaign under the standard bearer of democracy.

VERY GOOD REASONS

Why a Republican Is Under No Obligation to Support the Gold Bug Platform.

Cincinnati Enquirer

CINCINNATI—CAN YOU GIVE ME A SINGLE REASON WHY A REPUBLICAN SHOULD VOTE FOR FREE SILVER?

OHIO REPUBLICAN.

Well, from a partisan standpoint, and as an illustration clear to home, you might look your question on the following resolution, which was adopted by the Republican City and County General Assembly in 1877, after General Charles Brayerow, then Speaker and now chief mathematician of the McKinley management, had made a powerful speech in its advocacy:

"Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That common honesty to the taxpayer, the letter and the spirit of the contract under which the great body of its indebtedness was assumed by the United States, and true financial wisdom, each and all demanded the restoration of the silver dollar to its former rank as a full money."

If you require something more recent, why take this declaration from the National Republican platform of 1888, which was heartily indorsed by Governor Foraker, Charles Foster, Major McKinley, Major Butterworth and the rest of the Ohio delegation to the Chicago Convention which failed to nominate Senator Sherman for President:

"The Republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money, and condemns the policy of the Democratic Administration in its efforts to demonetize silver."

Here in the same line, is the financial declaration of the Republican National Convention of 1892:

"The American people from tradition and interest, favor bimetallism, and the Republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as standard money, with such restrictions and under such provisions, to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal. The interests of the producers of the country, its farmers and its workingmen, demand that every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the Government shall be as good as any other. We commend the wise and patriotic steps already taken by our Government to secure an international conference to adopt such measures as will insure a parity of value between gold and silver for use as money throughout the world."

Ice Cream Made by a New Process.

I have an Ice Cream Freezer that will freeze cream instantly. The cream is put into the freezer and comes out instantly, smooth and perfectly frozen. This astonishes people and a crowd will gather to see the freezer in operation and they will have to try the cream. I can sell cream as fast as it can be made and sell freezers to many of them who would not buy an old style freezer. It is really a curiosity and you can sell from $5 to $8 worth of cream and six to twelve freezers every day. This makes a good profit these hard times and is a pleasant employment. Address J. Casey & Co., 1143 St. Charles St., St. Louis, Mo., will send full particulars and information in regard to this new invention on application and will employ good salesmen on salary.

TALLYING PINEAPPLES.

Quick Work Done In Handling the Fruit on the New York Wharf.

The pineapple season lasts from about March 1 to about Aug. 1. New York gets pineapples from the Florida keys, from the West Indies and from the Bahamas. Some come in steamers, some in sailing vessels. Pineapples from Havana by steamer are loaded in barrels and crates. Pineapples brought in sailing vessels are brought mostly in bulk —not thrown in loosely, however, but simply stowed so that as many as possible may be get into a vessel.

On the wharfs here pineapples brought in bulk are handled with great celerity. Men in the hold of the vessel fill bushel baskets with the fruit and hand the baskets up on deck, where they are passed along and set up on the stringpiece of the wharf. The trucks in which they are to be carried away are backed down handy. A box of suitable height, and which is as long as the truck is wide, is placed at the end of the truck. A man standing near on the wharf lifts the basket from the stringpiece and sets them up on this box. Two men stand at the box, each with a basket of pineapples in front of him, to count the pines and throw them into the truck, which has racks at the sides; lengths of board are placed across the end as the load rises. Two men stand in the truck to receive the fruit as it comes to them.

The two counters are experts, and they work with great rapidity and steadiness, keeping pineapples going all the time. Each man picks up two pineapples at a time, one with each hand, and gives them a toss into the truck, both men counting as they go along, one after another, "one," "two," "three," "four," "five," and so on up, each count meaning two pineapples. When they strike "one hundred," the tallyman makes a straight chalk mark on the end of the truck; that stands for 200 pineapples. While he is making the chalk mark the other counter keeps right on, and he may have got up to "two" or "three" again, for it takes a second or two to make the chalk mark, but by that time the tallyman is at it again chinning in with "four," and away they go together again, counting up rapidly toward another hundred. If a man on the load finds a speckled pine, he drops it over the side of the truck into a basket that stands there, and says: "One out." The tallyman tosses in one without counting, to keep the count good.

As fast as the counters empty the baskets they push them off the box, and the man at the stringpiece sets up a full one in its place and the counters keep the pineapples going without cessation. At the fifth hundred the tallyman makes a mark diagonally across the four he has already made, in the commonly used method of tallying freight; but these five marks here stand for 1,000 pineapples. On a double truck there are usually carried from 4,500 to 5,500 pineapples; on a single truck, from 2,000 to 3,500.—New York Sun.

BURIAL OF POPE PIUS IX.

The Body Walled Up In a Temporary Tomb Until It Is Put In the Crypt.

Pope saw the scene which followed when the good pope's body had lain four days in state and was then placed in its coffin at night, to be hoisted high and swung noiselessly into the temporary tomb above the small door on the east side—that is, to the left of the Chapel of the Choir. It was for a long time the custom that each pope should lie there until his successor died, when his body was removed to the monument prepared for it in the meantime, and the pope just dead was laid in the same place.

The church was almost dark, and only in the Chapel of the Choir and that of the Holy Sacrament, which are opposite each other, a number of big wax candles shed a yellow light. In the niche over the door a mason was still at work, with a tallow dip, clearly visible from below. The triple coffins stood before the altar in the Chapel of the Choir. Opposite, where the body still lay, the Noble guards and the Swiss guards, in their breastplates, kept watch with drawn swords and halberds.

The Noble guards carried the bier on their shoulders in solemn procession, with chanting choir, robed bishops and tramping soldiers, round by the Confession and across the church and lifted the body into the coffin. The pope had been very much beloved by all who were near him, and more than one gray haired prelate shed tears of genuine grief that night.

In the coffin, in accordance with an ancient custom, a bag was placed containing 93 medals, one of gold, one of silver and one of bronze for each of the 31 years during which Pope Pius had reigned, and a history of the pontificate, written on parchment, was also deposited at the feet of the body.

When the leaden coffin was soldered, six seals were placed upon it, five by cardinals and one by the archivist of the Chapter of St. Peter's. During the whole ceremony the prothonotary apostolic, the chancellor of the apostolic chamber and the notary of the Chapter of St. Peter's were busy, pen in hand, writing down the detailed protocol of the proceedings.

The last absolution was pronounced, and the coffin in its outer case of elm was slowly moved out and raised in slings and gently swung into its niche. The masons bricked up the opening in the presence of cardinals and guards, and long before midnight the marble slab, carved to represent the side of a sarcophagus, was in its place with its simple inscription, "Pius IX, P. M."—Marion Crawford in Century.

TURNER, THE ARTIST.

Some Unflattering Pen Portraits of the Great Master of Landscape.

On the whole, the portraits of Turner in after life cannot be said to be satisfactory or reassuring. Turner's was doubtless a baffling face, a full one rather, which was difficult to seize without caricature, showing little of the fine spirit and poetical feeling which were displayed in his works and becoming coarser and redder as he advanced in life—a fave that rejected all attempts at idealization, at least in the hands of those who tried.

None of the written descriptions of him is very attractive: "A red Jewish face, with staring bluish gray eyes, the smallest and dirtiest hands on record; his coquetterie was very coarse and weather beaten; his entire that of a stagecoachman or an old man-of-war's boatswain"—this, according to Thornbury, was the impression he made on "less enthusiastic friends." "Turner had fine, intelligent eyes, dark blue or mazarine," said Mr. Trimmer, his old friend; "but, as it is said of Swift's, they were heavy rather than animated." Leslie writes: "There was, in fact, nothing elegant in his appearance —fall of elegance as he was in art. He might have been taken for the captain of a river steamer at first sight, but a second would find far more in his face than belongs to any ordinary mind." Unfortunately no artist has recorded that "second" sight. Mr. West, if he had tried, might have done so, but who else?—Cosmo Monkhouse in Scribner's.

Where Was He?

The Forfarshire lairds of a remote day were wont to go weekly to great Dundee, not so great then, to dine early, but to eat well, and ride away at night in every case very fit for the saddle. The road ran eastward for some miles on a height above the Tay, a steep grassy slope down to the Firth. One of the old gentlemen (they were gentlemen) rolled off his horse and rolled away down the declivity. The water at the edge was only a few inches deep at that season of the tide, and there he lay. By and by some one remarked that the laird's saddle was empty, though his horse was trotting on with the others. So the party turned back, looking for the missing man, and exclaiming: "Faar are ye, Balnawiggin? Faar are ye?" At length a voice was heard, coming from far below. "The faar ye faar I am. But I canna be in hell, for here's water!"—Longman's Magazine.

An Always Love.

"Say, I'm in love," confided the fare dealer to the lookout during a lull in the play.

"Why, you don't know what love is," laughed the lookout.

"Don't you believe it," retorted the dealer. "Love is a game that Cupid deals. He has a crooked layout, and the bank wins every bet. If you copper a case in his game it's sure to win; if you play a case open it loses, and you're in big luck if you don't get whipsawed in every turn. If a man calls the turn it's a 10 to 1 bet he drops dead."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Regal Bridal Gift.

A good story is told of the late Baron Hirsch. A charming young girl, well known in London society, married an equally well known guardsman. Neither was overrich. SCOTT'S CARBO-DIGESTIVE COMPOUND.

The great nerve remedy for INDIGESTION, Malnutrition, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, Loss of Appetite, Malaria, Constipation, Biliousness and kindred affections. One teaspoonful of this elixir will digest 2,000 grains albumen.

Does your food soar after eating? Are you easily confused and excited? Do you get up in the morning tired and unrefreshed, and with a bad taste in the mouth?

Is there a dull cloudy sensation, attended by a disagreeable feeling in the head and eyes?

Are you irritable and restless?

Does your heart thump and cause you to gasp for breath after climbing a flight of stairs?

Have you impaired memory, dimness of vision, depression of mind and gloomy foreboding?

These symptoms are sometimes accompanied by frightful dreams and are always distressing to a degree, caused by no other cause of ailments and means that you are suffering from Dyspepsia and Nervous Exhaustion.

There is no other remedy extant that has done so much for this class of troubles as,

Scott's Carbo-Digestive Compound.

It corrects all these conditions, causes the stomach to perform its natural functions and will be found superior to Cod Liver Oil as a fattening agent. It paralyzes and destroys the blood by causing the food to assimilate properly.

If your case has resisted the usual methods of treatment we are particularly anxious to have you give this Compound a trial.

We guarantee relief in every case and will cheerfully refund your money should our remedy fail to produce the most gratifying results.

Please remember that the appellation Patent Medicine does not apply to

Scott's Carbo-Digestive Compound.

It is a prescription put up by a leading physician who has made stomach and nervous troubles a specialty for years.

We court investigation and earnestly urge all physicians to write us for the formula of SCOTT'S CARBO-DIGESTIVE COMPOUND, which we will mail on application, that they may satisfy themselves of its harmless character and excellent virtues.

Scott's Carbo-Digestive Compound

"OLD RELIABLE"

HUCHES' TONIC

For CHILLS and FEVER

NEVER FAILS.

READ!

Mr. Jos. Atkins, Greensboro, Ala. "In the drug business for twenty-five years and never have sold anything that gave such satisfaction."

Mr. Irvin Miller, Walnut Grove, Miss. "I have been selling Hughes' Tonic for years. It has superseded all others in my trade. For this malarial country it is the very medicine we need."

Mr. R. Peirl, Glasgow, Ky., writes: "My daughter contracted chills. No prescription ever gave more than temps ary relief. Two bottles of Hughes' Tonic cured her completely. She had no chill after the first dose."

Mr. R. W. Walton, New Albany, Miss. "Of Hughes' Tonic sold, not a failure reported. A physician here has been cured by using Hughes' Tonic after trying to cure himself. It is a pleasure to handle such a remedy."

Ask for HUGHES' TONIC, insist on IT, and nothing else.

50c. AND $1.00 BOTTLES.

The Air We Breathe

contains Oxygen and Nitrogen in the proportion of one to five.

Drs. Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen

contains Oxygen and Nitrogen—the former greatly in excess—ozone, and is very soluble in water. Heat liberates it; it is taken into the lungs by inhalation, absorbed by the blood, which it purifies, and so goes directly to the seat of all diseases.
